MAKE PLANS FOR CHRISTMAS PARTY FOR ALL CHILDREN

General Committee Makes Arrangements To Bring
Joy To Many Kids

The toys have been purchased, the candy and fruit secured and the tree to be placed on the front lawn of the City Hall for the Children's Christmas Tree Party, Sunday evening next will be erected and dressed in the next few days.

The members of the general committee have been hard at work during the past couple of weeks.

The committee hopes that all the children of Daly City may attend this grand outdoor carnival.

A mixed quartet composed of students from the Jefferson Union High School, will sing "Silent Night, Holy Night."

There will be a short program, consisting of a few "toots" by our own band, the rendition of several dance numbers by pupils from Miss Rose's School. After this the children will be given tickets and presented with toys, candy and fruit, with a "Hey, Hey and Cheerio" from the members of the committee representing the various organizations of Daly City.

JEFFERSON SCHOOL PROGRAM SUNDAY IS WELL ATTENDED

Large Crowd Of Residents
Turn Out To Inspect
New Structure

Last Sunday afternoon saw the culmination of the efforts of citizens of the Jefferson School District in securing construction of three new school buildings for the children of this district.

At 2 o'clock appropriate ceremonies were conducted marking dedication of the Jefferson School, located on Allemany street between San Pedro road and Market street, in the southern part of the city.

To say that the building comes up to expectations is putting it mildly, as, in the opinion of the writer, the beautiful structure exceeded the fondest hopes of the most ardent supporters of the movement.

Taken by and large, this school, while not the largest, is easily one of the most imposing and complete grammar school buildings in San Mateo county.

Practically the same program will be carried out next Sunday at the dedication of the other two new schools, the Vista Grande and Crocker, as that rendered at the Jefferson dedication ceremony.

FAILURE TO OKEH ELICITS OFFICIAL BOARD PROTEST

Charge Of "Rotten Deal" Is Voiced Regarding WPA
County Projects

At Monday's meeting of the Board of Supervisors a vigorous protest against failure of the WPA to approve county projects was launched.

Supervisor Al Witt of the First Township moved that an official protest be made, both to Frank Y. McLaughlin, state WPA director, and Congressman J. J. McGrath, for the "rotten deal" which Witt stated the county was getting. The motion, seconded by Supervisor Walter High of the Second Township, was carried.

County Engineer Marshall reported to the board that with 1100 unemployed in the county, only $178,000 in county and municipal projects have been approved, and all of these will be completed next month. He stated that out of a total of $712,224 in county projects alone submitted to H. Gordon Hawes, regional manager of the Ninth WPA district, in San Jose, but $78,000 worth were approved. He stated that in his efforts to secure more for San Mateo County he encountered considerable "buck passing."

Engineer Marshall pointed out that the county's share of the forty million dollars allotted California for WPA projects should be at least one million one hundred thousand dollars, as the WPA allows approximately $1000 per unemployed person in distributing funds.

DALY CITY OWNED HORSES GO SOUTH

By J. W. MARCHBANK

I have sent eighteen thoroughbreds to Santa Anita for the meeting to begin on Christmas Day. Ten of the band will be two years old on the first of January—the birthday for all thoroughbreds in this country—and the other eight are one year or more older than the "babies." The public knows the members of the older division can run, having seen them win races at Tanforan and Bay Meadows. What the coming two year olds will do remains to be demonstrated. I am confident, however, they will uphold the high reputation of my Heather Farm as a blood horse nursery.

Right now the chief interest in my racing stable centers in the eligibility of three of my fillies to the first running of the Champion Stakes at the southern California course. Orra laughed home in front of good colts at Bay Meadows in phenomenally fast time and at the Championship distance, one mile. And what about Lady Florise? Many close observers pronounce her as good as Orra. Cantrip, the third eligible, can also step some. The race is coming on the last day of the year.

Maid of Perth earned brackets at Santa Anita early this year and after a recent "spell"—as our friends in Australia call a rest—may be expected to be at least near the height of her brilliant form in the coming sport.

Of the ten coming two year olds in my barn at Santa Anita six are by imported War Cry, three by my homebred stallion King Heather and one by my young horse Xenofol. Some of the War Cry youngsters are from King Heather mares and that greatly increases their value in my estimation. I have thought all along daughters of King Heather would prove to be of much worth in the breeding paddock and things are working out that way.

The thrill coming from witnessing the triumph of a Heather Farm product in a sweepstakes, such as that of Maid of Perth in the Lassie at Tanforan, overshadows any joy from the victory of a runner purchased from others. It is double pleasure. The fun would not be there if I bred good ones and sold them to have them win in the colors of others or if I purchased ready-made racers that won for me. I like to both breed high class ones and race them.

I went into the breeding business when there was no racing in California and apparently little likelihood of the game coming back. As is well known, however, I succeeded in restoring it and all will be well if high-minded sportsmen are at the controls and breeding of better horses is systematically encouraged. At present there is a lamentable paucity of worth while horses.

CAROLS TO OPEN CHRISTMAS DAY

Young People Of Calvary Baptist Church To Sing At Many Homes

Christmas Sunday will be celebrated at the Calvary Baptist Church, 5724 Mission street, as the pastor, Miles Dawson, speaks at the 11 o'clock morning service on the subject, "He Is Born: A King in a Manger." The choir will sing Christmas music.

At the 7:45 evening service the choir will render several Christmas anthems and the pastor will continue his series of sermons on "First John."

The young people will meet together in one group at 6:45 for a great Christmas service.

Tonight (Friday) the Sunday School will conduct its annual Christmas tree program at 8 o'clock. All are invited to attend. Something for each child. The young people are to carol in the early hours of Christmas morning. By telephoning ElkrIDGE 0455, you may have them sing at your home.

BENEVOLENCES FOR CHILDREN OF PUBLIC SCHOOLS

Various Units Furnish Clothing, Dental Service
Luncheon, Etc., To Students In Abundance.

Accomplishments on the part of parent teacher units along the lines of education, citizenship and child welfare during the past four months were reported by 42 San Mateo County unit presidents at the meeting of Seventeenth District, Friday last. Mrs. R. D. Richards presided in the Burlingame High School auditorium, which was gaily decorated in Yuletide manner with a profusion of Toyon berries, colored lights, candles and evergreens.

Mother Singers of the district, a group of forty voices under the direction of Mrs. Frederick C. Lee, with Mrs. C. M. Bandtel, associate, sang Christmas carols and were enthusiastically received. Four year old Margaret Anne Stifer rendered several

YOUTH IS VICTIM OF AUTO CRASH

John Cochran, 22, of 3224 San Jose avenue, was taken to the Alameda Hospital, Tuesday morning of this week, suffering from injuries he sustained in an auto accident.

The youth crashed into the rear end of a truck driven by Jimi Palarino, who is employed on the Refetto ranch at Colma. Palarino and Cochran were both traveling north on Mission street at the time. The accident occurred near Westlake avenue about 4:35 a. m. The injuries of the youth are not serious.

ROOSEVELT ENEMIES DELIRIOUS WITH FEAR

By J. W. MARCHBANK
Pioneer in Frontier Mining Work

Dr. Robert H. Clark, of the Department of Chemistry of the University of British Columbia, holds that chemistry must be given the credit for having done more to raise the standard of living of the human race than any other science. For example, the professor maintains, since chemistry has turned to agriculture 20,000,000 less people are needed to feed the United States.

Implications in an economic way from the assertions of Dr. Clark are enormous and so we are not surprised that he comes out flat-footedly in favor of a change in our industrial system, which he says is based on the requirements of an age of scarcity. He declares advances in science have rendered a new system of distribution and social control imperative.

In view of the conditions in the country today, with individuals of the vision of Dr. Clark pointing out clearly the inevitability of social readjustment, it is amazing to see day after day, in the anti-Roosevelt press, diatribes based on the old-fashioned political economy that is as extinct as the dodo.

Harold L. Ickes, secretary of the interior, recently made a speech in Detroit that has stirred up unreasonable outpourings of the rabid opponents of the President even more than anything the chief executive himself has ever said.

Secretary Ickes, who, by the way, resembles in physical appearance to a remarkable degree our own Senator Hiram Johnson, simply recited the plight the country was in prior to the administration of President Roosevelt, but he drew the picture so vividly, the hired mudslingers of the anti-Roosevelt newspapers can hardly find words to describe the horror their employer is supposed to experience. There is surely nothing wrong with the following:

"We erected a great Moloch before which we worshipped. We threw into the gaping jaws of that Moloch our common heritage of natural resources, our helpless men, women and children, and finally our government. Success in America no longer necessarily depended upon probity of character, sincerity of life, or intellectual qualities."

"If only we could make money, by whatever means, we would be envied and revered. Money washed away a multitude of sins. One could not be a social pariah, no matter what he had done, provided he were a multimillionaire."

A healthy note is sounded by Earle Knight, managing editor of the Alaska Weekly, in his column in a late issue of the sprightly publication when he points out the urgency of a wide market for manufactured products before the country can get back to anything approaching an even keel. He takes up the cudgels for well paid labor, not from any humanitarian consideration, but for enlarging the field of buyers for various articles.

Editor Knight found his chance when the National Manufacturers Association, in convention in New York, came out with the half truth that the cheaper a product can be produced the cheaper it can be sold and the lower the selling price, the larger number of people who can buy and use it. He rightly says:

"That statement of the Manufacturers Association appears to be simple, sound economics, IF, and only IF, cheapness of production does not mean cheap labor."

"If low price is achieved through technological means and labor receives a wage making volume sales possible no one can find fault with the result."

COMMUNITY CHRISTMAS TREE PARTY FOR CHILDREN, CITY HALL, SUNDAY EVENING, DEC. 22

COUNTY COUNCIL TO HOLD MONSTER DRILL TEAM WHIST

New By-Laws Submitted
And Approved And Adopted By Body

(Grace J. Hill, Pub. Chmn.)

The San Mateo County Council of the American Legion Auxiliary met in South San Francisco on Friday evening of last week for the regular monthly meeting. Six candidates were initiated into the American Legion Auxiliary for Bernard McCaffery Unit by members of the drill team. The very successful report turned in by Mrs. Beatrice Cameros, of the Italian Dinner held in Burlingame November 30, was enthusiastically received.

Plans are under way for a monster bridge and whist party, to be held in Redwood City Veterans Hall on January 31. Mrs. Marie Walsh is chairman for the affair. The proceeds will be used for new uniforms for the drill team. Mrs. Walsh will be assisted by members of the drill team.

Preceding the session of the Council, a meeting was held by the members of the drill team. A set of by-laws was submitted by the committee and acted upon. Later they were approved by the Council. Mrs. Florence Chess, Mrs. Jessie Zant and Mrs. Irene Signarowitz were elected on the advisory board of the drill team from the Council.

After completion of business, members of Bernard McCaffery Unit served cake and coffee. The next meeting will be held in Burlingame in January, date to be announced later.

Everyone is invited to attend the New Year's Eve Dance being given in Belmont Legion Hall, December 31, by the County Council of the Legion. They have promised a full evening of fun and frolic. We urge you to be there.

piano solos, adding the finishing touch to the musical program.

Free milk to needy children, clothing supplied, glasses and artificial limbs purchased, dental work, thousands of free lunches, groceries furnished needy families, undernourished children given food and clothing, sweaters purchased by Fathers Councils and a Baby Clinic maintained, are some of the successful projects carried out by the associations. One unit sent a graduating class to a Shakespearean performance in San Francisco. A great many father members have been enrolled and are cooperating and many philanthropic disbursements have been made, also contributions to character forming organizations. Bundle drives for the student aid shop maintained by Seventeenth District, and paper drives, were reported by all units.

Two new cafeterias have been opened, supplying hot chocolate and soup to children at a nominal cost. Other cafeterias are also doing splendid work and furnishing many free lunches. Christmas fetes have been planned for children all over the county, one unit furnishing gifts for all children from the first up to and including the fourth grade and class for exceptional children.

Splendid adult recreational programs have been carried out, study groups formed and educational movies given. Thousands of garments have been mended and cleaned, also shoes furnished. Red Ced Cross classes in first aid are being sponsored. Seventeenth District being the only one in the state to have a certified teacher of first aid—Mrs. Ray Boulton of Millbrae unit.

Many newswettes are published each month, publicity chairmen doing fine work. The executive board voted to hold a luncheon in honor of the press, the names of committee members and details to be announced later.

Mrs. E. I. Bartlett, state chairman of home reading, delivered the Christmas message; Dean Charles S. Morris, of San Mateo Junior College, spoke on "Fathers Councils," and Mrs. J. J. Garland, president of Sequoia unit, talked on "P. T. A. in High Schools." Mrs. J. B. Spann, president of Burlingame High School unit, announced that her members were working to secure a public address system. According to report of Mrs. Myrtle I. Owens, membership chairman, the membership is expected to reach the 5000 mark by April 1, 1936.

Carburetor Differences

The difference in power as between a down-draft and up-draft carburetor arrangement is explained by the fact that the weight of the mixture provided for the cylinders is greater in the case of the former. Those power increases which are claimed for the down-draft type are actual, not theoretical.

DALY CITY MEN CHOSEN TO HEAD NEW ORCHESTRA

WPA Music Project In San Mateo County Gains
New Impetus

Daly City has been honored by the selection of two of its leading musical citizens, who have been appointed by the WPA to take charge of the Music Project of San Mateo County. Mr. Gilbert L. Green, recently of Redwood City, and who is now residing on Santa Barbara avenue here, has again been appointed supervisor of music for the county, and will also direct the orchestra. Mr. Edgar A. Vinal will act as Mr. Green's assistant.

Mr. Green was the director of the SERA orchestra, and the expectations are that the new orchestra under WPA will far exceed the caliber of the former orchestra. This is due to the hearty co-operation of Miss Harle Jervis, state director of music for WPA, and Mr. Ernest Bacon, supervisor and director of music for the County of San Francisco.

It is hoped that Daly City will avail itself of the opportunity to attend and enjoy the concerts that this group of artists will give.

It has been suggested that Mayor Smith and the Daly City Council will sponsor as many concerts for Daly City's benefits as the bookings of the orchestra will permit.

The selection of Mr. Green and Mr. Vinal as the heads of this organization is in itself a great compliment to Daly City.

CALLING ATTENTION TO THING OF BEAUTY

One of the most beautiful and artistic window decorations ever displayed by a Daly City business house is that of the Relish Bakery at Knowles avenue and Mission.

The idea carries out all the thoughts of the Yuletide season with portrayals of the Savior in the cradle wrapped in swaddling clothes, a sparkling Christmas tree and a huge bell made of chocolate and sugar. Many other holiday delicacies almost too beautiful to eat, in the forms of variously shaped cookies, Santa Claus, ginger bread, Lebkuchen, fruit cake and candy all blend in a riot of color and beauty.

MEMBERS OF SEWING CLUB ENTERTAINED

Mrs. Beatrice Foppiano of Evergreen avenue entertained the members of her sewing club Tuesday evening of this week.

After a delightful evening dainty refreshments were served to the following: Misses Edith Guadagni, Helen Laufer, Albina Brovelli, Gemma Morazzini, Barbara Morazzini, Ruth Bernardo, Jessie Augustien and Mrs. Esther Scardigli.

BUTCHER TREATED FOR INJURED HAND

Mr. Micco sustained a serious cut on his right hand while at work in the shop at about 3 o'clock that afternoon.

Four stitches were taken in the injured member.

RUST PREVENTION

When the metal first begins to show through on hood and fenders they should be refinished immediately.

If allowed to remain in this condition for any length of time rust will gradually work under the finish and the cost of refinishing will be materially increased.

PROGRESS NORMAL AT MILLS FIELD

Despite the "knocking" of a San Francisco newspaper whose policy is to discredit the present administration and whose publisher is attempting to dictate who shall be the next president of the United States, the work at the Mills Field Municipal airport in First Township, is progressing very favorably, excepting that contractors are alleged to be discriminating against San Mateo County labor in favor of their own men.

With a third steam shovel on the job, WPA officials are confident that the $1,675,000 seaplane base will be completed within the specified time to meet requirements of the Pan American Airways and the United States Coast Guard. Additional equipment is being arranged for and two six hour shifts, with the possibility of three such shifts will be in operation.

The average citizen knows that the "Knocking" of men at work on the project is nothing more than political propaganda to discredit the present administration.

REGULATION PLEA FOR BAKING INDUSTRY

An ordinance regulating the baking industry is being considered by the bakers of San Mateo County, according to John Fickeisen, who appeared before the board of supervisors on Monday requesting cooperation in drawing up such an ordinance.

Supervisor Fred Beer, County Executive Walter T. Kellogg and a representative of the district attorney's office were named to take up the matter with a committee of bakers.

SYNOPSIS

As Alan Garth, prospector, is preparing to leave for his mining claim in the Far North, a plane lands at the airways emergency station. In it are Burton Ramill, millionaire mining magnate; his daughter, Lilith; and Vivian Huxby, pilot and mining engineer. Believing him to be only an ignorant prospector, the men offer to make an air trip to Garth's claim, although they refer to his samples of platinum-bearing ore as nearly "worthless." Lilith Ramill, product of the jazz age, plainly shows contempt for Garth. Through Garth's guidance the plane soon reaches the claim site. Huxby and Ramill, after making several tests, assure Garth his claim is nearly valueless, but to "encourage" young prospectors they are willing to take a chance in investing a small amount. Sensing treachery ahead, Garth secretly removes a part from the motor of the plane. Huxby and Lilith taunt Garth, but their tone soon changes when they try to start the plane. Returning to shore they try to force Garth to give up the missing part. Garth manages to set the monoplane adrift and the current carries it over the falls. He points out that he is their only hope in guiding them out of the wilderness. Garth begins the work of preparing for the long journey. He insists that the others help. Ramill and his daughter must be hardened for the hardships ahead in their trek to the outpost on the Mackenzie.

CHAPTER IV

The Whip Hand.

The girl licked her fingers and turned to stare covetously at the pieces of moose dangling in the smudge-fire smoke. She spoke to Garth almost civilly:

"I've no need to rest like Dad. Do I have to wait for another piece?"

"Certainly not. But you'll let the cook-fire go out. Keep this one going, and you can use it. Better cut another spit. Mind the knife edge, if you don't want to lose a finger."

She showed she could be deft enough when she chose. One stroke of the knife hacked off a willow twig, two cuts sharpened the end. Grasping the bottom of the uncut second liver, she sliced up lengthwise, all the way to the rawhide thong. She poked the green wood from the near edge of the fire, piled on dry sticks, and crouched down to hold her spit over the blaze.

Garth had at once begun to make catgut. It would be needed to sew the moccasins. He was intently at work, and the girl was still more intently eyeing her meat, when Huxby came striding between the spruces.

The once elegant engineer was smeared with mud from his midbody down to where the rock-milk water of the ford had drenched the bog slime from his shoes and leather aviator trousers. Snags had scratched his flying jacket and even torn through one sleeve.

Worst of all, his bare face and neck was a swollen mass of mosquito-bite welts and the bleeding wounds of deer-fly stings. The skin had already begun to puff and discolor.

At sight of the man's condition, Garth picked up his rifle. Even the most cold-blooded, calculating schemer can be tortured into crazed violence.

Miss Ramill glanced up from her cooking, and uttered a startled cry. It awakened her father from his doze. He sat erect to start at Huxby.

"My G—d, Vivian, what's happened? You look like something the car brought home."

"Those d—d pests," Huxby cursed. "Left my headnet. Hey, you airplane thief, fetch me a drink. Jump lively."

Garth lifted his rifle. "Put up your hands. No, don't reach for your pistol. Up with them, or I'll wing you—That's it. Now hold them there while Mr. Ramill takes your pistol. I've had enough of your threatening."

The millionaire looked at Garth's cool gray eyes, and heaved himself upon his feet to shuffle around behind Huxby's shoulder. He pulled open the leather jacket and drew the automatic pistol from its high-slung sheath. Holding the butt forward, he brought the weapon to Garth.

"Keep it yourself," Garth told him. "You can give it back to him soon as he gets over this fly madness. There's your headnet, Huxby. Better stand in the smoke till you get it on."

The tormented man first ran to lie down on the hill bank. Between deep drinks, he doused his bitten face in a pool and dashed the gratefully cool water over the back of his neck. The moment he stopped, the pests buzzed at him again. He ran to the smoky side of the fire without stopping for his headnet.

For the first time since Garth had met Lilith Ramill, she showed consideration for someone else than herself. Her second piece of liver had been cooked enough to be eatable. She tore it in two and gave half to her fiancé.

"It's good, Vivian. Try it. You must be famished."

Her unexpected graciousness calmed his half-crazed mind.

"Why, Lilith—you roasted this yourself! It will taste doubly delicious." He forced a laugh. "But I couldn't take the food out of your mouth."

"I'll soon cook more. There's plenty." Garth caught Mr. Ramill's hungry look, and shook his head. "Not yet for us, sir. We'll pack in some more of the meat before the wolverines get it."

He laid a mat of willow foliage, sliced up what was left of the second liver, and started off with Ramill.

Though at first stiff, the millionaire did not get out of breath so quickly as before. This was an encouraging sign. That easy climb to the claim and the fast return had been violent exercise for the mine investor. He could not have recovered so soon if his heart had been bad.

But when he opened his cigar case, Garth interposed.

"You have only four left, sir. Better hold them back to taper off gradually. This change of diet is going to jolt you hard enough. No wine or whisky, either."

Mr. Ramill walked along quite a distance with the cigar case open, his face impassive inside the mosquito gauze of the headnet. When at last he looked up, he closed the cigar case and handed it to Garth. "You're the doctor."

Garth put the case in his shirt pocket.

"All right, sir. You'll get them when they'll do you the most good—and you'll get them all."

Again Mr. Ramill walked along with his gaze on the ground. They were near the muskeg swamp before he looked up. He turned his shrewd gaze upon Garth, and spoke with blunt directness: "What's your game?"

"My game?" "Yes. We may as well settle this now as later. Don't tell me you haven't some big scheme in mind. You guessed we meant to cast off and leave you holding the sack. Otherwise you wouldn't have taken that key part from the plane motor."

Garth chuckled. "Did you ever outwit a fox, corner a pack of wolves, or trap a crafty old bear?"

The ruddy face of the millionaire purpled. "What is the connection?" "Nothing invidious," Garth assured him. "I had in mind only the fun of the game."

"So? Well, young man, it has already been admitted that you've so far taken all the tricks. I gave you credit for more sense, however, than you showed when you cast loose the plane."

Garth Lifted His Rifle. "Put Up Your Hands."

You had no need to walk up like a dupe and permit Vivian to get the drop on you. Easy enough for you to've come out of cover with your rifle up. Don't tell me you'd rather travel afoot to the Mackenzie than fly out in a plane."

"That depends, sir. Perhaps I did not wish to part company with you so soon. Over at the river, I could of course have invited myself to fly out to Fort Smith with you. But that would hardly have given us time to get acquainted. As it is, in the weeks of close companionship to come we may even learn to be friends."

Mr. Ramill frowned. "Is that a taunt, or maudlin sob stuff?"

"Neither." "Then what's your game? If you think, after marooning us here in these d—d wilds, you can win our friendship or gratitude by guiding us out, you're a sadly mistaken young man."

Garth agreed. "It would be a stupid mistake to expect anything decent from you or your daughter or Huxby. But think what fun I've already had, facing that pistol and telling Huxby he dared not use it."

"Fun? You must be crazy!"

"Not at all. I had him sized up. The game was to let him think he had me trapped, then give him the laugh."

The big man chewed on this. "That's clear enough. But why wreck the plane? Will your next joke be to walk off and leave us to starve?"

"Does it look that way? Two moose make a deal of eating."

As Garth spoke, he pointed ahead at the red chunks on the spruce branches. Almost at the same instant his rifle jerked up. The second shot was followed by a snarling squall. The squall shrilled into a shriek that nipped off into silence.

When Mr. Ramill rather hesitatingly followed Garth to the hanging legs of moose, he saw a three-foot, stub-tailed wildcat with black-tufted ears lying under a torn shoulder of moose meat. A second cat, slightly larger, had leaped several yards away before dropping.

Garth drew his knife. "Only a pair of lynx. Not much for two shots. We haven't any cartridges to throw away. But we can use the skins, and the meat will make a change from moose."

He flayed the bodies, bagged the best cuts of meat in the skins, and hung them high. The next move was to see if Mr. Ramill could pack the hide of the cow moose. He made a game attempt to walk off under it, but at once began to stagger. Garth relieved him of the load, and in place of it gave him one of the bagged lynx skins. He himself bagged one of the bull moose quarters in the cowhide and heaved it upon his back.

They came back to the camp with Mr. Ramill panting and sweating. Garth swung lightly ahead of him. He slipped off his heavy pack and stood looking at the idle couple on the hill bank. They had eaten their fill of liver, and stretched out to rest. No smoke was rising from the embers of the smudge-fire. Flies were beginning to cluster on the moose tongues and other meat.

The girl met his look with contemptuous indifference. Huxby stared with bloodshot hostility from between his swollen eyelids.

Instead of speaking to the couple, Garth addressed the girl's father as he relieved him of the lynx pack:

"As I remember, sir, I told Miss Ramill she could cook on the smudge-fire if she kept it going. I will say now that I do not intend to shoot any more meat until use is made of what we have. There are none too many rifle cartridges. If the three of you prefer rotten, maggoty meat, I'll go you to the last mouthful. I've lived for weeks at a time on spoiled fish and rotten walrus."

Huxby's face and neck were as swollen and sore as if covered with boils. His temper was no less sore. "You're the one who put us in this fix, you wood louse!"

Garth gave him a pitying look. "That's the fly venom talking. No cool, calculating schemer in his right senses would ask for trouble when his hands were tied. I might point out, however, that the venom was due to your haste in trying to—uh—appropriate my discovery claim."

"That's a lie. You cast the plane adrift. I was stung while trying to save it. Curse the luck! I came within an ace of reaching the snagged line. Almost had it, when the plane dragged it loose and went down over those hellish falls!"

"I might remind you that you ordered me to cast off the line—at the point of your pistol."

The thrust proved too much for Huxby. He sat silent. Garth went on with his quiet argument:

"All that is now past history. We're more concerned with the present and future. Mr. Ramill has shown his common sense by facing the facts of the situation. He has fallen into line. The question is, do you and Miss Ramill throw in with us, or do you go on your own? If with us, I'm to be chief. How about it?"

Huxby had cooled down enough, to see the point. "You win. I join up."

Miss Ramill looked puzzled and a bit alarmed. "What's the great idea, Vivian?"

"Very simple, my dear. He has the whip hand. He is boss. We must obey his orders, or we'll never get back to civilization."

"Oh! The despicable, cowardly—" She met Garth's cool gaze and fell silent.

He nodded. "You'll begin by rebuilding that fire. After that you'll cook the other liver for your father and yourself. You will then start graining the hair off the moosehides while Huxby and your father go back for more meat."

"I will do no such thing!"

"Very well. That means you get no moccasins to replace your boots when those filthy soles wear through on the rocks."

She flared: "Gallant Sir Galahad!" "Leave her be, Garth," her father interposed. "I'll tend the fire and scrape the skins."

"No. Lie down. Whenever you work, it's to be on your feet. We must build up both your wind and your muscle. Huxby, I'll ask you to fetch that pot and the gold pan."

The mining engineer rose and started up towards the trough without a word of inquiry or protest. Miss Ramill's eyes widened. She gazed wonderingly from him to her father. Mr. Ramill had no less obediently lain down as ordered.

Garth ignored the girl. He chopped deep notches in the trunks of the food-cache birch trees, about seven feet high. He then cut saplings to span across from tree to tree, with ends wedged in the notches. The next move was to fetch a number of alder poles.

When he returned, smoke was billowing up to drive the flies from the moose tongues and muzzles. Miss Ramill had rebuilt the smudge-fire and taken down the liver, ready for slicing. She gazed up at him, stormy-eyed, ready to flare if he had shown the slightest flicker of amusement or gloating.

Instead, he gave her a curt nod of acknowledgment, laid his knife beside the liver, and turned to space the poles across the sapling framework to make a grill above the smudge. Upon this he laid the moose leg and the pieces of lynx meat.

Huxby came back from the discovery stake with the gold pan and little aluminum pot. He stared in surprise at sight of Miss Ramill cooking the liver. She shrugged her slim shoulders, and drew back from the fire to give one spit to her father. After that she silently offered the other to Garth.

"Thank you," he said. "Let me suggest that you now fill the gold pan with water and slice into it one of the muzzles. They don't look promising. But if simmered for a day or two, a single moose muzzle will give us several delicious meals of what might be called aspic jelly."

This won no sign of interest from the girl. She was no longer hungry. Garth ignored her silence.

"After starting that dish, you may cook as much more of the liver as your father can eat. He will keep on resting while Huxby and I go for another load of moose meat. The sooner we pack all to camp, the surer we will be that other mouths do not get away with it."

He unbuckled his pack, slung the pack-board on his back, and picked up his rifle and belt-ax. Huxby trailed after him out of camp. They walked in Indian file all the way around to the muskeg swamp, Huxby with his gaze fixed coldly upon the back of his leader.

At the swamp Garth cut a tote-pole and passed it through the tendons of two hindquarters of moose. The remaining quarter he strapped to his pack-board. He folded the second lynx skin for Huxby to use as a shoulder pad. Upon it the mining engineer rested his end of the tote-pole.

Giraffe, Tallest Among Quadrupeds of the World

Tallest among the quadrupeds of the world, the giraffe is constructed along a variety of levels, its front legs longer than its long hind legs and its neck longer than the longest of its other members, with a tongue of length and flexibility entirely suited to the architectural whole.

In fact, notes a writer in the St. Louis Globe-Democrat, there are evidences in support of one belief that nature must have started to make something else when it got around to fashioning the timid creature. Original plans probably called for a quadruped of conventional dimensions and the barrel and rear running gear must have been completed before amendments were decided on. Very likely the many quadrupeds of comparative size looked too much alike. So it was probably decided this new animal should have a much longer neck, and to make its neck longer than the facts justified it must have longer front legs. So we have an animal started in regularity and finished in singularity, with its body sloping up from rear to front legs and a neck so long that it distorts the distortion.

Nature in all truth must have been in a sportive mood when it made the giraffe. If it sought to give the jungle a laugh it succeeded admirably, giving the laughing hyena something about which it could laugh without restraint.

The beast has to straddle itself all out of shape to get a drink of water from the level of its own feet! So by habit it has taught itself to drink very little water, or at least to drink it with great infrequency. The long neck, the long front legs and the up-tilted body could hardly have been anything but afterthoughts.

River Flows Uphill

It has been figured out by the United States geological survey that a point at sea level on the equator is about 13 miles farther away from the center of the earth than a sea level point at either of the earth's poles. Their calculations show the mouth of the Mississippi river to be four miles farther from the earth's center than its source. Thus, it may be said the "Father of Waters" runs uphill. This phenomenon results from the water in the river obeying the laws of gravity which cause it to run from the higher surface level at its source to the lesser one at its mouth.—Pathfinder Magazine.

Old Maid's Home an Arsenal

Residents of the peaceful Paris suburb of Montrouge were perturbed over rumors that a house in the district occupied by two aged spinsters was a veritable arsenal. Finally the police were prevailed on to investigate. In the house they found 17 military rifles, dating back to 1870, modern rifles, revolvers, rounds of ammunition and even hand grenades.

Uncommon Sense

By John Blake

© Bell Syndicate.—WNU Service.

Your muscles may be powerful and willing, your lungs may serve you perfectly, your eyes and ears may do their work well, but it is your mind that is the boss.

Fortunately for you that brain can be improved to a far greater extent than your biceps and sinews can.

Your physical power is limited by your bodily strength.

This can be improved only to a certain extent.

But your mind can be cultivated and expanded, and become, year by year, if it is continually exercised, of more use to you.

I admit that some minds are superior to others.

But, save in the case of the imbecile, every mind can be forced to do more and better work, and to increase its owner's chances of being something more than merely average.

Of course, if you take everything you see for granted as Wordsworth's peasant did the primrose, your mind will not develop very rapidly.

But if you read and study, and if you enlist every mental resource that you can muster on every thinking job you have to do, you will be surprised how much clearer and vigorous are your thoughts and the deductions you draw from what is going on around you.

When you read, read something worth reading, and keep your attention fixed on it.

When you walk abroad, note carefully what is around you, whether it be a tree or a mountain or a herd of cows cooling themselves in a stream.

When you have problems to solve keep working at them till you solve them if a solution is possible—which it usually is.

This world would still be a chaos if man, as soon as it cooled down enough to permit him to live in it, had not possessed the power of thought and used it. Learn how to think connectedly and with a purpose. Learn to concentrate. The mind that flits here and there like a butterfly will not be much more useful to its owner than the butterfly's mind is to it.

Think about everything you see. Talk to intelligent people. When things puzzle you, do not ask somebody else to explain them. Figure them out for yourself.

People had seen apples fall off trees for years without ever thinking about it. Then Isaac Newton came along, thought a little about the subject, and the reason for their fall—the attraction of gravitation became a part of the world's knowledge.

Most people who are moderately successful fall into the habit of looking back at their past achievements.

Don't Look Back. Achievements, once performed, are so to speak, over the dam.

Forget them.

Keep your mind on what you are going to do, not what you have done. I once had a carpenter at work for me who as soon as he got a couple of planks nailed to the timbers of a barn he was building had a habit of stopping to admire his work.

He would descend the ladder on which he was working, and gaze fondly at what he had done, with the air of little Jack Horner and his Christmas pie.

Naturally that consumed considerable time which would have been more profitably spent going on with the job.

But when, after a long time, his work was complete, and he asked what he was to do next, I informed him that he was through.

I couldn't afford to pay a full day's pay for a quarter of a day's time, and that is all that I got from him.

Lay out whatever you are doing before you begin.

Think over the job first. Get a mental picture of the task when it will be completed.

Most of the work done by men and women is capable of being thought out in advance.

Mental work must be done in the same careful way that physical work has to be done.

The architect of a great building has to have every detail of it in his mind before he commits it to drafting paper.

The commander of troops on a battlefield has to shift his advance constantly, for he never can tell what the other fellow is going to do and what the other fellow is going to do is the crux of the whole matter.

Even so, the commander must proceed by plan, and stick to his plan as long as it is possible.

You and I and the great majority of people are not subject to the shifting movements of the battlefield.

We can stick pretty well to our original plans and continue to stick to them till they are carried out as we want them to be carried out.

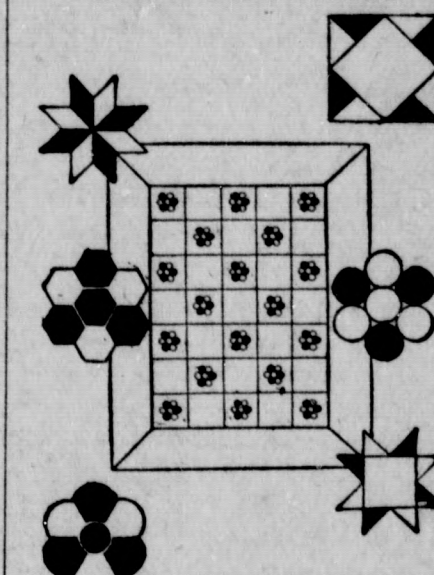

Looking back and wondering whether we have done this or that thing right is fatal to success.

Know at the beginning where you are going, and, as far as possible, how you mean to arrive there.

Then put all your earnestness and strength into the enterprise, and you will have an excellent chance of success.

Inexpensive, Easy Patchwork Quilts

By GRANDMOTHER CLARK

Patchwork quilts as a rule are elaborate, cost quite a bit and represent many days of tedious work. This work and cost can be cut down to a minimum as shown in the illustration. Any of these designs can be used on eighteen nine-inch blocks and so arranged to make a full size quilt. About three ounces or one yard of prints is all that is required for the patchwork. Folder No. 536 in colors illustrates four ways to assemble these different designs, also cut out diagrams for six different patches like the above. Information about yardage required for back, border and blocks is also given.

The folder No. 536 and folder No. 6 with other quilting information will be mailed upon receipt of 10 cents, or send us 19 cents and we will send folder and sufficient beautiful patches to make up the patchwork on one of these simple quilts.

CHRISTMAS STORY CONTEST WINNERS

Following are the three articles written by students of the Pershing School which were adjudged the best in the order of their appearance.

Christmas in Other Lands

In some of the countries of the world the people do not have Christmas Trees or hang up their stockings as they do in United States or do not even know about Santa Claus as they call their Christmas Spirit by some other name.

In Russia he is called St. Nicholas and it is his birthday that is celebrated on December 6th and little presents and sweetmeats are given to children by a person dressed like a priest.

In France the children watch for the baby Jesus to come to them on Christmas Eve. Before they go to bed they put their best shoes or slippers by the chimney. In the morning they will be full of candy. But they do not have a jolly time on that day as we do, as they consider it a church holiday. On January 6th the people have the same good times that we have on Christmas.

In Germany Santa Claus is known as Kriss Kringle. All over the country are Christmas Trees as the German people were the first to have Christmas Trees. The only presents put on them are for the fathers and mothers.

In Holland Santa Klaus rides on a beautiful white horse and the children fill their shoes with hay and oats and leave them out side the door to feed the hungry horse. In the morning instead of oats there are gifts for the good children and a stick tied with a ribbon for the bad ones.

Carols Happiest Christmas

"Oh!" said Carol, who was a little girl with brown curls living in an orphan asylum, "I wish I had a home like other boys and girls and a dear mother and father." I could have a little Christmas tree and invite all my girl friends to my Christmas party. I could give a little gift to each one. She was talking to Miss Smith, the matron, who looked up from her sewing with a kind look in her eyes.

Now it was getting late and Carol had to go to bed. Her heart was sad. "This Christmas will be like every other one," she thought, "sad and lonely."

In the morning, which was visiting day, Carol was called to the office. In the office she met a young lady by the name of Mrs. White. The lady said, "How would you like to come and live with me?" Carol was too happy to speak. She began to cry. Then Mrs. White said, I will call for you on Christmas Eve."

The day before Christmas Carol was busy packing her things. She was very happy. About five o'clock Mrs. White came in her carriage and got Carol.

On the way home she told Carol that her mother had died when she was small and that she was her aunt, but she was going to try to be a real mother to her. Carol said, "This is my happiest Christmas."
MARGUERITE ROGERS.

FOR HUMMING GEARS

A humming noise in the gears of the transmission, or in the differential, should be given immediate attention.

It is a symptom of what may prove a costly trouble. At its first manifestation, the hum probably is the product of nothing more serious than late predecessors as well, is a much "fine" mechanism than old cars were.

As a consequence, a slight misadjustment of various units, such as the ignition timing, will make a greater difference in respect to performance efficiency.

WHEN CLUTCH GRABS

There is the prospect of further serious trouble when the clutch shows signs of grabbing. The grabbing, of course, is indicative of a clutch misadjustment that will result in an expensive repair to that unit if left unchecked.

Many rear axle troubles—and rear axle repairs are expensive—are the direct result of allowing the clutch to continue its tendency to be grabby.

A Christmas Night Dream

On Christmas night I went to bed early and soon fell asleep. Santa Claus came into the house and asked me if I wanted to go to his toy-shop with him. I said I would like to and we were on our way very quickly.

He had four beautiful reindeer driving his sleigh and covered me with a heavy blanket to keep the cold, snowy, air from freezing me.

Finally we arrived at his shop and Santa took me into the toyshop where I saw hundreds of little men working busily. Each had a long, rusty colored beard and was making toys. Then Santa told them to show me everything and I was taken around the shop. In another room there were more little men and one of them told me to push a button on a little box. I pushed it and suddenly out came Mr. Jack in the Box. In another room I saw other little men busily painting, carving, and gluing things and I saw all the toys in the shop. Later Santa told me to come so he could take me home where I would find some toys that I wanted under my Christmas tree. Santa pushed me toward the sleigh suddenly and I opened my eyes to find my mother shaking me to show me my toys.

WEEKLY BULLETIN

CHRISTMAS WARNING

By Chief A. P. Chesney

Lives will be lost and many homes destroyed by fire during the coming Christmas season. These disasters, large and small, are sufficient justification for the local fire department to spend a little work warning the citizens how to eliminate holiday fire hazards.

Their efforts directed against the following Christmas fire hazards may again, this year, save much suffering and loss.

Flammable decorations and dangerous lighting effects, coupled with carelessness in millions of homes, make ideal settings for fires.

Tree trimmings and toys are easily set on fire by heat or sparks, such fires spread very quickly. When it becomes dry an evergreen tree is very flammable and should never be placed near a fire place or stove. It should be set up firmly and placed where it will not obstruct an exit from the room or building. It should be taken out of the house as soon as possible after Christmas. If allowed to remain it gets dry and is a serious fire hazard.

In spite of all the education which has been done people will still follow the dangerous practice of using candles on or about the Christmas tree. Electric light units are safe, but care must be taken that the bulbs are tight in their sockets and the globes should not be touching either tree or ornaments as they get very hot. The insulation and the wiring should be checked to see if it is in good condition before being strung on the tree.

The use of asbestos products instead of the cotton wool to imitate snow is an obvious safety measure. Flammable decorations of paper or cotton should be kept away from all possible sources of ignition.

I would like all the organizations in Daly City who are giving Christmas tree festivals to their members in the different halls around town to see that all exits are kept clear and have some cool heads around to get the children out without any damage or injury. Remember, a child has not got an adult's head to think with.

Altitude Advice

Motorists whose trips take them into mountainous areas for the first time, frequently are puzzled at the sudden loss in engine efficiency—the manifestation of a sudden sluggishness in its performance.

This will not be mysterious, and can be corrected quickly if it is remembered that the carburetor mixture that is perfect in the lowlands will be too rich for mountainous country.

LESSON SERMON OF CHRISTIAN SCIENCE

"Is the Universe, including Man, Evolved by Atomic Force?" will be the subject of the Lesson-Sermon Sunday, December 22, in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, branches of The Mother Church, The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Mass.

The Golden Text will be: "Every house is builded by some man; but he that built all things is God" (Heb. 3: 4). Other Bible citations will include: "O the depth of the riches both of the wisdom and knowledge of God! how unsearchable are his judgments, and his ways past finding out! For who hath known the mind of the Lord? or who hath been his counselor? Or who hath first given to him, and it shall be recompensed unto him again? For of him, and through him, and to him, are all things: to whom be glory for ever. Amen" (Rom. 11: 33-36).

The Lesson-Sermon will also include the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy: "From the infinite elements of the one Mind emanate all form, color, quality, and quantity, and these are mental, both primarily and secondarily. Their spiritual nature is discerned only through the spiritual senses" (p. 512).

RELIGION IN THE NEWS

(By Rev. Miles Dawson)

Twenty centuries ago Jesus was born as the King of the Jews. He was of the lineage of David, and was the legal heir. But the Jews did not accept Him as such, because of His lowly birth. Throughout His life on earth He was despised, rejected, and finally crucified.

Each year at Passover, the Hebrew father even today goes into his yard to look for Messiah, his king, disbelieving that Jesus was that One. But now we learn of a modern trend in the mind of Jewry. Before a meeting of Jewish lawyers in Jerusalem, a Dr. Reichswehr and a Dr. Blandesiler read manuscripts of debate, in an effort to prove or disprove that the judgment passed on Christ was unjust. The verdict of the debate was rendered as favoring Christ. Perhaps it is from this legal debate and its outcome that a new effort is being made by prominent Jews to stage a re-trial of the Christ by learned Jews of the world in Jerusalem. Torah and the civil laws of ancient Jerusalem will be used in this effort to justify the Christ, or to re-condemn Him. This trial is set for a future date not far off.

GOOD PITCHING HOLDS TANFORANS AT TOP OF LEAGUE

Carrasco-Palmini Combination Excel In Hectic Pitching Duel—Volkman Ties Game With Triple—Davies Fans Eighteen.

(By Al Gould)

Creighton Davies, crack right-hander of the Daly City Tanforan nine mowed down the opposition in high-class manner Sunday, to hold local club at head of Recreation league. In sending eighteen batters down by the strike out route, and allowing the hard hitting American Building Maintenance club only five scattered hits, Davies continues the great achievement of establishing a strike-out record that will take many years to shatter in the semi-pro ranks.

The combination of Carrasco and Palmini played an important part in Sunday's victory, and, with the mighty bat of Volkman getting into action, furnished the real thrill to the local fans.

Johnny Vasquez, popular shortstop, was forced to be absent from the local batting order on account of illness, but "Lola" Petrocchi deserves much praise for the able manner he handled the shortstop berth as a substitute.

Read the detailed play by play report which follows, and learn all about the high caliber of baseball these boys play in their battle to keep Daly City on top.

JOAN CRAWFORD DRAWS CROWDS TO NEW FILM

Star Offers Scintillating Portrayal In "I Live My Life," At Local Theater

The most entertaining picture to date this year comes to the Daly City Theater, Sunday and Monday, December 22 and 23, where Joan Crawford and Brian Aherne appear in the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production, "I Live My Life."

Directed by that master, W. S. Van Dyke, it is eight reels of humor, drama and brilliant photography. The superb cast includes such experts as Frank Morgan, Aline MacMahon, Eric Blore, Fred Keating, Sterling Holloway, Hedda Hopper and others.

A bored society girl meets a hard-boiled archeologist at work on the exotic Greek isle of Naxos. That they should fall in love, is inevitable. Following her to New York, he finds a different state of affairs. She is wealthy and he penniless. She likes city life and he hates it. When her shrewd grandmother offers him several millions as well as the vice presidency of the firm, he is sorely vexed.

On this premise, "I Live My Life" proceeds to its dramatic, hilarious conclusion.

Also on the same program, "His Night Out," with Edward Everett Horton.

Continuous show—Christmas Day, Wednesday, December 25.

George Ade Tells How He Remains Youthful at 70

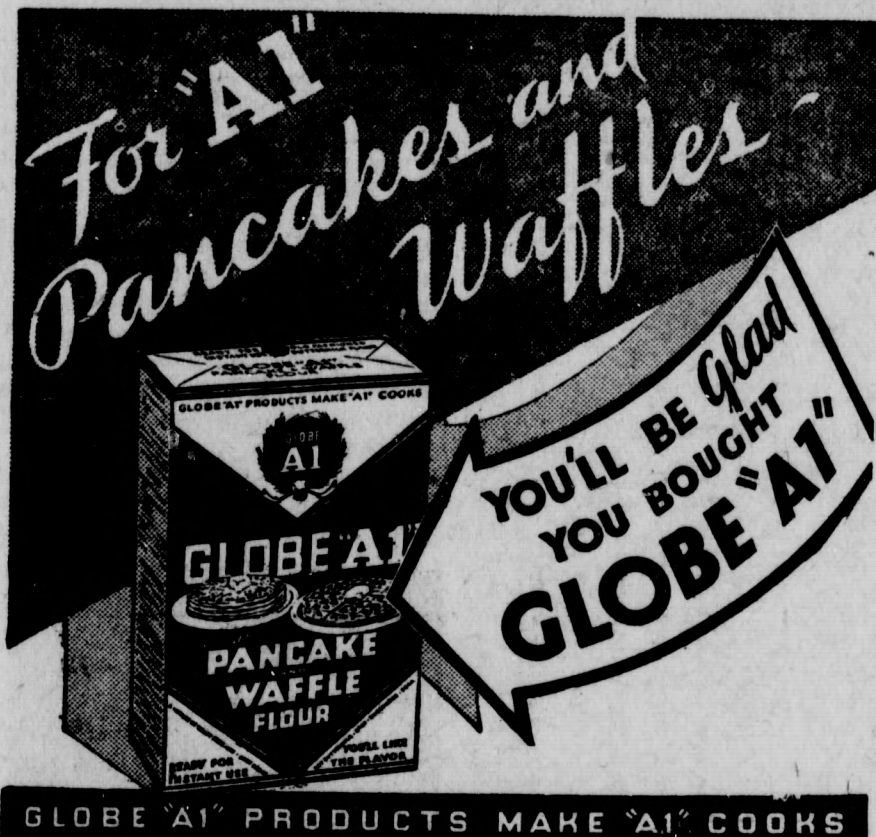

George Ade, the Hoosier humorist, tells how to be young at seventy. "Live only in the present," he said, "that's the secret."

He was "appalled" to detect a sign of age in himself. "I caught myself reading the obituary notices the other day before I turned to the sports page, and that's a sure sign of ossification," Ade mourned.

"But I won't let myself become a mossback and a has-been, so I keep the old bean in touch with the latest news, the latest plays, the latest movies, and the latest books."

SUNNYVALE AIR BASE PLEDGE IS HELD AS LEGAL

Attorney General Has Ruled That County Can Keep Its Promises

The "gentlemen's agreement" entered into by the San Mateo County Board of Supervisors to contribute $50,000 towards the purchase price of the Sunnyvale air base is perfectly legal, according to the ruling received this week from Attorney General Webb by District Attorney Gilbert D. Farrell.

Controller Stack, when informed of the ruling, declared that he would wait a few weeks before paying over the money; that is, the $10,000 now due. "For" said Stack, "not only is this $10,000 involved, but $40,000 more which must be paid. There is no hurry."

THREE TO BE WATCHED

What are the three most common causes of mishaps? Every accident tabulation shows them to head the list with almost monotonous, as well as tragic regularity. They are, in the order listed:

Violation of the right of way rule. Driving too fast for conditions. Driving on the wrong side of the street or highway.

The latter, although related to the right of way regulation is placed in a separate category.

OCEAN HIGHWAY PROMISED EXCESS GAS TAX FUNDS

Timothy Riordan, member of the State Highway Commission has informed Supervisor Manuel Francis of Half Moon Bay and Supervisor Al Witt of Daly City, that the commission had not forgotten the promise to use first excess gas tax money on the Pedro Mountain sector of the Ocean Shore highway.

A report had gained ground that this money was to be used in the construction of the Waldo approach to the Golden Gate Bridge and naturally the county supervisors were greatly concerned over this reported breaking of a pledge to San Mateo County.

It is understood that there will be about two million dollars in excess of budgeted funds in the gas tax treasury, and, if the assurance of Mr. Riordan is carried out, the Pedro Mountain sector money is safe.

In 1928 electric rate cut saved our customers $2,418,900 yearly.

In 1930 electric rates again saved our customers $3,020,000 more yearly.

In 1935 an inducement rate saved our customers $1,600,000 in one year.

Now in 1935-1936 reduced electric rates save our customers $3,924,000 yearly.

Now more than ever electricity is the Biggest Bargain in Your Home.

BEFORE this month is out, you will be using cheaper electricity—much cheaper now than ever before. Many families will save enough on the electric bill each month under the reduced electric rates beginning with January bills, to receive much added service at little or no additional cost, depending upon their monthly use of electricity. To take advantage of the savings from the new low electric rates, many families right now are buying electrical gifts for Christmas.

Electrical Servants Cost So Little —Do So Much

What electrical servants does your family want for Christmas? Is it one of the new electric refrigerators? How about a really good reading lamp for your living room? Or perhaps housework can be made easier with a modern vacuum cleaner, washing machine or iron? Then do not forget about a new radio, electric clock, sandwich grill, percolator, toaster, coffee maker or waffle iron. Many of these appliances, depending upon the amount of electricity you regularly use, can be operated for weeks and months with the savings from your added use of electricity under the reduced electric rates.

Electricity does more for you in your home and costs less than anything you buy. Let us help you plan to receive greatest benefit from the new low electric rates. Call at our office or phone for our representative.

A CHRISTMAS STORY RETOLD

The story entitled, "The Other Wise Man," by Henry Van Dyke is the account of one, Artaban by name, who sold all his worldly possessions and bought with the price three precious jewels, a sapphire, a ruby and a pearl. These gems were one day to be given away to the baby Jesus, the new born King. Artaban had read in the movement of the stars this prophesy fulfilled. It was all so easy for him to believe and understand this wonderful message.

Unable to interest his friends in what to them seemed a wild vision, he started out alone to meet a waiting caravan. "The Christ Child is born," the stars seemed to say. Jupiter and Saturn seemed to roll together, "like drops of lambent flame," Artaban understood this to mean that the King was coming. This wise man journeyed on through fertile fields, near dusty threshing floors, over many a cold desolate pass, down dark mountain gorges, near terraces full of vines and fruitage, then out upon the flat plain where the road ran straight.

Near a grove of date palms, Vasda, the horse, slackened her pace; she seemed to scent danger or difficulty of some sort. Finally she stopped before a dark object in the shadows of the trees. In the dim light of the stars, Artaban discovered a man lying there. His simple dress and humble mien indicated him to be a Hebrew. His yellow parched skin showed to Artaban that he was suffering from fever. Although the man seemed to be dying, his bony fingers grasped at the wiseman's robe and would not let go. The caravan would not wait for long. Artaban knew this, but he could not leave this stricken stranger. So he stayed and ministered to him until his fever left him and, after leaving healing herbs and all that he had left of bread and wine, he again continued his way to meet the caravan.

When he reached the appointed place, no sign was there of the wise men, but a note explained that they could wait no longer, and for him to follow them across the desert. Despairingly, Artaban sold his sapphire and purchased camels and provisions for the long journey. He reached

Bethlehem only to learn that the Christ child with his father and mother had recently departed in haste to Egypt, for Herod the king was seeking the baby's life. The fear bound village seemed deserted, but he found another mother and child and in this home he was made welcome. He marveled at the Christlikeness of this babe and its mother. As he pondered thus, he heard a clashing of swords and Herod's soldiers appeared in the doorway demanding that Artaban step aside that they might enter and slay the child. The ruby must be sacrificed to save the infant. The captain of the soldiers gladly accepted it and commanded that this family be left unharmed.

The weary traveler continued his search into Egypt. Much of his time was spent among the wretched, healing and comforting them.

At last, years later, he came again to Jerusalem, at the time of the crucifixion. There was gloom everywhere. A beautiful girl was being dragged along by soldiers. She was to be sold into captivity for her father's debts. The pearl was still left and the girl must be saved.

The ground quivered. The earthquake shook a heavy tile from the roof. It fell on the old wise man. As the girl, whom he had saved bent over him she heard him say, "When saw I thee an hungered and fed thee? Or thirsty and gave thee drink? Or when saw I thee a stranger and took thee in? Or naked and clothed thee?"

Very faintly she heard the answer. "Verily I say unto thee, inasmuch as thou hast done it unto the least of these, my brethren, ye have done it unto me."

The other wise man's quest was ended and his treasures had been accepted by the King.
